Moutai Q3: Strong Fetien mix, but the high-end inventory correction continues

Moutai's revenue returned to growth in Q3 (+3% YoY) driven by the continued exceptional performance of the iMoutai channel which was +8x yoy, driving Direct sales to 54% of mix. However, overall momentum again missed expectations by 2/3% as distributor channel declines weighed on overall performance due to the high-end inventory reduction that is taking longer than anticipated. The miss flowed through to EPS which was up 4% yoy.

Overall Fetien revenue grew 1% yoy, with +40% direct sales growth offset by a 22% decline in distributor channel sales. Direct sales mix climbed 14% points yoy reflecting underlying strong channel mix for regular Fetien given the c. 20% higher ex-factory price for the brand in that channel. Once the high-end inventory reductions in the distributor channel stabilize, we expect this strong Fetien channel mix to show through, along side the impact from the MSD and HSD Fetien ex-factory price increases pur through in March and July 2026.

OLS revenues grew 22% in the quarter, driving negative segment mix, but this was more a function of soft OLS comps (-34% YoY in 25Q3) than structural growth, and we expect OLS growth to moderate in Q4 as the segment cycles a -17% prior year comp. Moutai's gross margin contracted 170bps yoy as segment mix and inventory corrections overwhelmed the Fetien channel mix. EBIT margins were incrementally impacted by increased selling expenses relating to the new high-end consignment model leading to a 200bps EBIT margin contraction.

Investment Implications

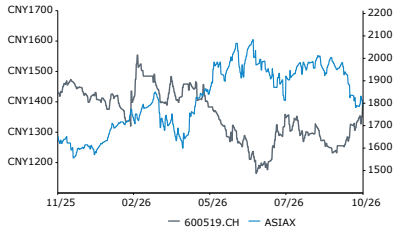

We rate Moutai Outperform and cut our Price Target to RMB2,000 from RMB2,015 after cutting our EPS estimate by 3-4% (model), maintaining our target multiple and rolling forward our valuation base by one quarter.
