Sliding Wind Power Orders Eroded Profitability

Huatai Research | Quarterly Results Review

11 November 2026 | China (Mainland) | Specialty Steel

Guangda Special Material (Guangda) released its 3Q26 results: for 9M26, revenue was RMB3,549mn (-5.98% YoY) and the attributable NP was -RMB17mn (-106.74% YoY). For 3Q26, revenue was RMB1,226mn (-1.13% YoY) and the attributable NP was -RMB29.10mn (-145.71% YoY). The loss was due to lower order deliveries in the wind power business, with significant declines in revenue from various castings, forgings, and component processing. In addition, higher per-unit fixed costs and lower prices for some products led to a YoY decline in the overall gross margin. Looking ahead, as offshore wind projects enter the construction and equipment tendering phase, and as the company continues to execute its upmarket strategy, profit could recover. Maintain BUY.

9M26 GPM down 7.09pp YoY

The 9M26 overall gross margin was 12.75%, down 7.09pp YoY, because insufficient wind power orders led to lower capacity utilization and higher per-unit fixed costs, compounded by price declines for some products, which pressured the gross margin. On the expense front, the 9M26 selling/administrative/R&D/financial expense ratios were 0.57/3.47/4.35/2.90% (+0.02/+0.09/+0.46/-0.52pp YoY), indicating sound expense control. Beyond the significant gross margin contraction, credit impairment losses of -RMB24.79mn (loss widened by RMB7.62mn YoY) and asset impairment losses of -RMB6.28mn (loss widened by RMB3.32mn YoY) further eroded profit, with credit impairment losses on accounts receivable and notes receivable rising sharply YoY. Other income of RMB19.19mn (-39.2% YoY) also weighed on profit.

Deyang base saw robust growth

At the strategic level, Guangda is transforming from a wind power heavy-asset model toward high-end materials and components across multiple fields. The wind power segment is under near-term pressure from shrinking industry installation demand, but the company is offsetting the wind power decline by expanding into new application scenarios such as petrochemicals and hot-work die materials. At the business level, the Deyang base (Guangda New Materials) is operating steadily, with 1H26 revenue of RMB923mn and NP of RMB59mn (investor relations record dated September 30, 2026). Orders for gas turbine cylinders, retaining rings, bearing housings, and other castings and forgings, as well as hydropower upper crowns and lower rings, continue to ramp up. In aerospace, high-purity high-temperature alloy electroslag ingots and homogeneous fine-grained high-temperature alloy forgings are being supplied in batches to customers such as aero-engine and rocket engine manufacturers, with the defense and nuclear power segment gradually contributing incremental volume. On capacity construction, the company's Xinsheng base has been rated as an advanced-level intelligent factory in Jiangsu Province, with digitalization and intelligence levels continuing to improve. On new product layout, the company has achieved batch supply of superconducting coil armor materials for nuclear fusion, and new materials for petrochemical and hot-work die applications are being industrialized.

Maintain BUY

We largely maintain our earnings forecasts, projecting 2026/2027/2028 attributable NP of RMB27/74/113mn, with BVPS of RMB16.92/17.16/17.48. Peers trade at an average of 0.94x 2027E P/B on iFind consensus. We assign 0.94x P/B, with a target price of RMB16.21 (previous: RMB18.36, based on 1.08x 2026E P/B). Looking ahead, a near-term recovery in the wind power business still requires a rebound in downstream installation demand, but the Deyang base and the defense/nuclear power segment could partially offset the decline. Coupled with the commercialization of new material products in the R&D pipeline, we are positive on the company's medium-to-long-term path toward a multi-field high-end materials platform. Maintain BUY.

Risks: Commodity price fluctuations, and weaker policy execution/downstream demand than we expect.
