Data center model refresh ahead of investor day

ORCL	12m Price Target: $206.00	Price: $125.54	Upside: 64.1%

Oracle Investor Day on 10/29 will be at a time of heightened debate on the AI infrastructure ecosystem. Since its September 2025 Investor Day, Oracle has delivered FY26 revenue in line with its original framework, raised its FY27 target to >$90bn, and grown RPO to $664bn from $455bn, providing greater visibility into its long term growth trajectory. At the same time, the conversation has consolidated around three topics:

- Can Oracle execute on its data center capacity plans in the context of greater political focus and acute bottlenecks? We expect updates here on the steps Oracle is taking to mitigate risk and its visibility and flexibility to move up or down specific ramps.
- How sustainable is the demand environment? We expect updates on customer concentration and breadth of customer backlog, as well as Oracle's ability to cross sell and come up the stack with e.g. database platform offerings.
- How does 12 months of datapoints impact FY28-30 targets? For example, what levers does Oracle have to match capex cost with MW monetization, and how do customer BYOC and prepayments impact financing plans? In our view, the key company-specific dynamic to watch will be an inflection in OCI gross profit, likely in the next 12 months.

Capacity ramps

OCI capacity ramp is accelerating with buildout pipeline that supports a near-term step function in supply. After delivering 1.2GW+ of capacity in FY26, Oracle delivered 850MW of capacity in 1QFY27, showing an accelerating deployment cadence. We outline recent commentary on Stargate facility progression below.

- Abilene (TX), the most advanced site, has already delivered

42% of total capacity, with another 35% within 90 days (as of 4QFY26); and the remainder through 2QFY27, implying a near-term ramp in available compute. As of 1QFY27, Oracle had delivered 6 of 8 Abilene buildings, representing 618MW and 75% of campus capacity.

- Shackelford (TX), has 115MW online as of 4QFY26, with delivery expected to begin in 1HCY27.
- Dona Ana (NM), delivery is expected to begin in 1HCY27.
- Port Washington (WI), delivery is expected to begin in 2HCY27.
- Saline Township (MI), delivery is expected to begin in 2HCY27.

On potential delays or execution issues:

1. Project Jupiter (Dona Ana, NM): Project Jupiter's power plan shifted from gas turbines and diesel generators to Bloom fuel cells in June, changing the project's power architecture. In August, the New Mexico Supreme Court stayed proceedings related to key air quality and water permits, creating uncertainty around the project's permitting timeline. Oracle subsequently disclosed that the stayed air permit proceeding relates to a separately owned microgrid rather than the data center buildings themselves, which continue to be constructed. Most recently, Oracle reportedly invoked force-majeure protections tied to the project schedule: Oracle is seeking the ability to defer payments if the site misses its planned 2028 opening. We believe this suggests the power/permitting issues may be credible enough to formally protect against delay-related costs.
2. Lighthouse (Port Washington, WI): Investors have concerns on the transmission infrastructure required to power the campus after Wisconsin regulators halted the existing $1.6bn transmission proposal; Oracle has said it is working to secure regulatory approval for the high-voltage lines serving the campus.

While facility-specific datapoints may continue to drive near term volatility, Oracle reiterated confidence in its broader capacity ramp given the diversity of supply coming online. Management argued that the market sometimes frames campus delivery incorrectly. Even gigawatt scale campuses are brought online in phases over multiple quarters, meaning capacity is added incrementally rather than all at once. As a result, delays at any individual site are unlikely to materially alter the overall delivery profile, particularly given the breadth of projects currently under development. Oracle also emphasized that its outlook incorporates some level of conservatism across every campus and incorporates contingency plans where appropriate. Oracle continues to point to a large and diversified pipeline of data center developments across the U.S. and internationally, which reduces reliance on any single campus and provides multiple paths to support its planned capacity expansion.

We expect facility-specific developments to remain a focal point for investors given the importance of capacity to backlog conversion. While Oracle's diversified pipeline reduces over-dependence on single sites, capacity delivery remains one of the most important risks to supporting its substantial backlog.

Updating our data center build

Methodology and key assumptions (first introduced in our January initiation):

- We start with Oracle's OCI forecast to arrive at implied net new revenue for FY26 through FY30. We split net new revenue into: a) Non AI net new revenue, which is further split between i) database net new based on Oracle's long-term targets and ii) core OCI net new assuming 5% yoy growth; and b) AI net new revenue, which we back into based on total net new and non AI net new.
- We forecast capex on kit (GPUs, other compute, networking). We assume that kit related capex (GPUs, CPUs, networking, storage) will be procured ~6-9 months before. We drive our kit forecast off net new AI revenue. We assume the ratio of kit to net new AI revenue is 3.0x (up from 2.0-2.5x given higher capex guidance with no corresponding visibility into monetization levers), improving to 2.5x by FY28.
- We model non kit related capex (land, power, cooling) based on the details Oracle and its partners have already provided about its Stargate facilities, with average cost/GW ~$12.5bn. The annual cost to Oracle will be the cost of leasing and the variable cost of maintaining and operating the facilities; we assume 17% (12% from leasing and 5% from variable costs). Our 5% variable cost estimate back solves based on Oracle's gross margin disclosure.
  - We validate our capex on kit (outlined above) based on bottoms up analysis of GPU, server, storage, and networking cost per GW at each facility and our estimates of timing of facility ramp.
- We then forecast EBITDA and operating cash flow based on Oracle's historical margins. We assume $10bn in cash is held on the balance sheet as a buffer (equivalent to about 2 quarters of opex). For the purpose of this analysis, we assume that any capex that cannot be funded by operating cash flow is funded by debt. We also include estimates of additional CFO funded by prepayment (Oracle has guided to $20-25bn of prepayment for FY27). We then estimate the cost of debt based on conversations with our Credit Strategy team (supported by analysis on typical cost of debt for software companies).

Our key takeaways:

知识星球：前沿信息收录
更多一手投研资料扫码加微信
知识星球：前沿信息收录
VX:FCCNN88

- We believe Oracle's gross margin target of 30-40% over a 6-year contract lifetime is reasonable.
- We expect financing needs to peak in FY27/FY28 (commensurate with capex peaking in these years). For FY27, Oracle has guided to $90-95bn of reported capex and $70B in FY27 net cash outlay reflecting $20-25bn of customer prepayments, which effectively reduce the company's funding requirement. For balance sheet capital, Oracle expects to raise $40bn in FY27 through a mix of debt and equity (with the $20bn ATM equity issuance executed in 1QFY27), leaving $20bn of additional debt financing expected in 2HFY27 (as Oracle does not plan additional debt raises in calendar 2026.) For FY28, we expect a similar level of required financing - for purposes of this analysis we assume it is executed through new debt.
- Based on our estimates Oracle's net debt to EBITDA leverage peaked at <4x in FY26 (excluding operating leases). Taking our FY24-FY30 forecast in isolation (i.e. making no assumptions about FY31), Oracle would exit FY29 at <20x net debt to leverage. These ratios are well within investment grade based on agency baselines.

Investor Day

We outline key catalysts into Oracle's Investor Day on October 28th:

- Potential upside to revenue targets: Recall at Oracle's September 2025 Investor

知识星球：前沿信息收录
VX:FCCNN88

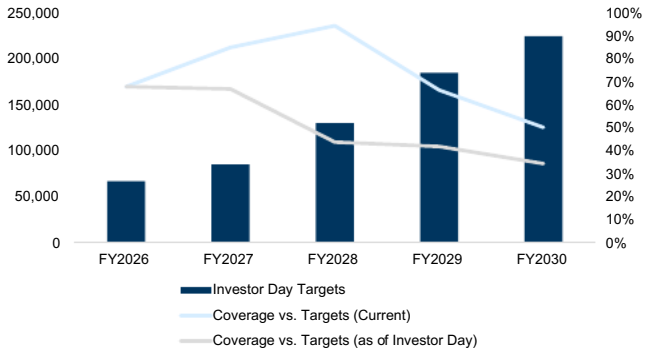

Day, management outlined a revenue framework of $67bn, $85bn, $130bn, $185bn, and $225bn for FY26-FY30. Since then, Oracle has executed ahead of plan, delivering $67.4bn of FY26 revenue and raising its FY27 target to $90bn+, while leaving FY28-FY30 unchanged. Since Investor Day, RPO has increased from $455bn to $664bn, while coverage of the FY28-FY30 revenue targets has improved by roughly 30% on average (Exhibit 3). Given Oracle's greater visibility today than when it originally established the framework, we see potential upside to the FY28-FY30 targets. The key debate heading into Investor Day is whether management chooses to formally raise its long term outlook to reflect the substantial increase in contracted demand.

- Visibility capex intensity and timing: Oracle disclosed in 4QFY26 that FY27 and FY28 are expected to be peak capex years, with capital intensity moderating in FY29 and beyond. While investors broadly understand FY27 spending requirements, the magnitude of the incremental step up in FY28 remains less clear. We expect investors to look for greater detail around the timing of capacity deployment and the associated capex ramp. Beyond FY28, a key question is what level of capex is required to continue expanding capacity once the currently disclosed ~10GW pipeline is delivered (i.e. what sustained demand requires from capital investment).
- Financing updates: Oracle has outlined a FY27 financing framework supported by roughly $20bn of equity issuance (ATM program, already executed), $20-25bn of customer prepayments ($11bn as of 1Q), ~$20bn of debt issuance (expected in 2HFY27), with the remainder funded through operating cash flow. As spending moves into FY28, investors will be focused on the mix of prepayments, debt, and equity required to fund growth, particularly given continued pressure in credit markets and elevated CDS levels (Exhibit 4).
- 10GW capacity roadmap: Detail on the pace of capacity deployment, site-level delivery schedules, and how quickly new capacity converts into revenue.
- Value in the stack beyond infrastructure: While OCI remains the primary driver of investor enthusiasm (as Oracle expects IaaS to be ~75% of the business by FY30), we believe the most durable software platforms will need vectors to deliver value beyond the infrastructure layer as the AI ecosystem matures.
  - Database: Oracle's opportunity with its AI database and data platform is substantial, driven by its unique position as the custodian of enterprise data combined with strategic AI capabilities. Oracle remains a dominant player as a custodian of enterprise data, albeit at a lower market share (~15% in 2025 vs. ~40% in 2014). Recall at the 2025 Investor Day, Oracle introduced targets of $3bn/$4.3bn/$8.2bn/$13.5bn/$20bn for FY26-30. In 1Q, cloud database revenue was $0.9bn, or +26% yoy, decelerating vs. 29% in 4Q and drawing focus to Oracle's ability to hit the FY27 +40%+ targets. We note continued momentum in multi cloud database (+353% yoy) while multi cloud customers increased 180%, supported by Oracle's expansion to 70 multi cloud database regions and 119 availability zones across AWS and Azure.
  - Strategic SaaS: SaaS revenue grew 10% (vs. 9% in 4Q, though below 11% in 2Q/3Q), with Fusion growing 14% and industry applications growing >20%.

Valuation & Key Risks

We maintain our Buy rating. We lower our 12-month price target to $206 (from $240), based on 13x (from 15x given limited visibility into financing environment) Oracle's 2030E adjusted net income, discounted back to SNTM (Q5-Q8) to be consistent with our broader coverage framework. We adjust our FY27/28/29 EPS to $8.07/$10.05/$15.23 from $8.07/$10.27/$15.59 to reflect our updated build.

Key risks include customer concentration risk, timing and execution of the data center build-outs, intense capex investment cycle and financing needs, and accelerating share losses in the database/SaaS market.

GS Factor Profile

The Goldman Sachs Factor Profile provides investment context for a stock by comparing key attributes to the market (i.e. our universe of rated stocks) and its sector peers. The four key attributes depicted are: Growth, Financial Returns, Multiple (e.g. valuation) and Integrated (a composite of Growth, Financial Returns and Multiple). Growth, Financial Returns and Multiple are calculated by using normalized ranks for specific metrics for each stock. The normalized ranks for the metrics are then averaged and converted into percentiles for the relevant attribute. The precise calculation of each metric may vary depending on the fiscal year, industry and region, but the standard approach is as follows:

Growth is based on a stock's forward-looking sales growth, EBITDA growth and EPS growth (for financial stocks, only EPS and sales growth), with a higher percentile indicating a higher growth company. Financial Returns is based on a stock's forward-looking ROE, ROCE and CROCI (for financial stocks, only ROE), with a higher percentile indicating a company with higher financial returns. Multiple is based on a stock's forward-looking P/E, P/B, price/dividend (P/D), EV/EBITDA, EV/FCF and EV/Debt Adjusted Cash Flow (DACF) (for financial stocks, only P/E, P/B and P/D), with a higher percentile indicating a stock trading at a higher multiple. The Integrated percentile is calculated as the average of the Growth percentile, Financial Returns percentile and (100% - Multiple percentile).

Financial Returns and Multiple use the Goldman Sachs analyst forecasts at the fiscal year-end at least three quarters in the future. Growth uses inputs for the fiscal year at least seven quarters in the future compared with the year at least three quarters in the future (on a per-share basis for all metrics).

For a more detailed description of how we calculate the GS Factor Profile, please contact your GS representative.

M&A Rank

Across our global coverage, we examine stocks using an M&A framework, considering both qualitative factors and quantitative factors (which may vary across sectors and regions) to incorporate the potential that certain companies could be acquired. We then assign a M&A rank as a means of scoring companies under our rated coverage from 1 to 3, with 1 representing high (30%-50%) probability of the company becoming an acquisition target, 2 representing medium (15%-30%) probability and 3 representing low (0%-15%) probability. For companies ranked 1 or 2, in line with our standard departmental guidelines we incorporate an M&A component into our target price. M&A rank of 3 is considered immaterial and therefore does not factor into our price target, and may or may not be discussed in research.

Quantum

Quantum is Goldman Sachs' proprietary database providing access to detailed financial statement histories, forecasts and ratios. It can be used for in-depth analysis of a single company, or to make comparisons between companies in different sectors and markets.

Ratings, coverage universe and related definitions

Buy (B), Neutral (N), Sell (S) Analysts recommend stocks as Buys or Sells for inclusion on various regional Investment Lists. Being assigned a Buy or Sell on an Investment List is determined by a stock's total return potential relative to its coverage universe. Any stock not assigned as a Buy or a Sell on an Investment List with an active rating (i.e., a stock that is not Rating Suspended, Not Rated, Early-Stage Biotech, Coverage Suspended or Not Covered), is deemed Neutral. Each region manages Regional Conviction Lists, which are selected from Buy rated stocks on the respective region's Investment Lists and represent investment recommendations focused on the size of the total return potential and/or the likelihood of the realization of the return across their respective areas of coverage. The addition or removal of stocks from such Conviction Lists are managed by the Investment Review Committee or other designated committee in each respective region and do not represent a change in the analysts' investment rating for such stocks.

Total return potential represents the upside or downside differential between the current share price and the price target, including all paid or anticipated dividends, expected during the time horizon associated with the price target. Price targets are required for all covered stocks. The total return potential, price target and associated time horizon are stated in each report adding or reiterating an Investment List membership.

Coverage Universe: A list of all stocks in each coverage universe is available by primary analyst, stock and coverage universe at https://www.gs.com/research/hedge.html.

Not Rated (NR). The investment rating, target price and earnings estimates (where relevant) are removed pursuant to Goldman Sachs policy when Goldman Sachs is acting in an advisory capacity in a merger or in a strategic transaction involving this company, when there are legal, regulatory or policy constraints due to Goldman Sachs' involvement in a transaction, and in certain other circumstances. Early-Stage Biotech (ES). An investment rating and a target price are not assigned pursuant to Goldman Sachs policy when this company has neither a drug, treatment or medical device that has passed a Phase II clinical trial nor a license to distribute a post-Phase II drug, treatment or medical device. Rating Suspended (RS). Goldman Sachs Research has suspended the investment rating and price target for this stock, because there is not a sufficient fundamental basis for determining an investment rating or target price. The previous investment rating and target price, if any, are no longer in effect for this stock and should not be relied
