Overall, our impression from memory makers' 3Q26 results has a positive bias (EPS/margin beat against F/X headwinds, pricing upside, successful HBM price negotiation, and volume delivery). There were a few company-specific disappointments (e.g. SEC's lack of imminent shareholder return and Kioxia's weak CY4Q26 guidance); however, we view this to be temporary (SEC's shareholder return catalyst should be back in Jan-2027 and Kioxia's CY1Q27 growth should be above seasonal and ahead of peers). While end demand signals continue to be mixed between B2B (steady hyperscaler's AI capex spending growth with consensus upward revisions for next year) and B2C (PC/Mobile facing greater challenges), we believe that bottom-up memory S&D fundamentals should continue to be very solid through 2028E.

- DRAM - Fundamentals keep surprising on the upside. In 3Q26, DRAM prices once again surprised on the upside, driving mild beats across the board (DRAM ASP up 23% Q/Q vs. our expectation of high-teens - 20% up Q/Q). Incremental surprise was in the 4Q bit-guidance with memory makers guiding DD% Q/Q increase and the industry likely exiting 2026 with high-20% y-y B/G. Memory makers began shipping HBM4 and guided to HBM4 bit/revenue crossover in 3Q26/4Q26E but more importantly guided to narrowing profitability vs. conventional DRAM heading into 2027E upon successful price negotiation. We have been guiding that an aggressive HBM ASP increase could be a double edged sword (stronger memory earnings vs. demand destruction) but believe smooth negotiation across the board implies largely manageable risk at the end customers (JPMe: +96% HBM ASP increase in 27E). Memory makers have unanimously voiced demand outstripping supply beyond 2027 (some guiding 2027 memory is de-facto sold-out), and we believe such guidance should provide relief once earnings begin to prove resilience amidst the market's AI funding and sustainability concerns.

on NAND entering a price downcycle as early as 4Q26E, citing inventory buildup and China capacity addition, we believe the NAND industry fundamentals are resilient without signs of price cuts/downcycles in the near-term. While we acknowledge the genuine price growth deceleration, we believe Kioxia's December-quarter guidance miss is due to company-specific issues (pull-ins in Sep-Q and push-outs to March-Q). We sense a diverging NAND industry B/G outlook (MU guiding as high as mid-20% B/G in 27E vs. SKH guiding high-teens%) and we believe this is largely due to differences in capacity ramp timing. Structurally speaking, the KV-cache offload driven eSSD demand is ongoing and we believe cost-efficient NAND solutions will continue to gain interest from CSP customers for AI model optimization. Of note, based on our checks, we believe China NAND makers are mostly focused on manfaucturing consumer-related applications and see limited threat to the international eSSD demand.

- LTA coverage expanding across memory makers. We believe investors' attention on LTAs has somewhat subsided as investors worry about the memory cycle as early as in 27. Ironically, 3Q26 earnings marked every memory maker guiding 2027 as part of the LTA contracts with a greater number of customers (i.e. SEC/SKH have both expanded the LTA customer scope) with a few contracts extended beyond 2030. Broadly speaking, memory makers guide at least 50%+ LTA coverage scope in 27/28 and we believe SEC is the most proactive in LTAs highlighting 60-70% LTA coverage scope by 2030.

As of 3QCY26	MU	SEC	SKH	SNDK	Kioxia
Number of Agreements	- 26 SCAs signed to date (vs. 2Q: 16 SCA) - Visibility extended to 2031 for two agreements	- 10 signed, 10 more negotiating.	- ~14 key customers incl. major CSPs	- 8 NBMs	- ~10 LTAs concluded
Volume coverage	n.a. (2Q: ~20% of DRAM volume / ~1/3 of NAND)	- Target 60%-70% of capacity by 2030 / HBM sold out in 27	- >50% of 27/28 capacity - Aims to keep ~50%+ over the medium term	- >50% of bits in FY2027; - ~2/3 of bits in FY2028	- >1/3 of FY27 bits under contract - Targeting 50% LTA volume coverage for CY2028
Revenue Coverage (when complete)	- ~35% of revenue by 2030 - Ultimate ambition still ~50% of revenue through 2030	n.a.	- Maintain an appropriate level based on market conditions - (not quantified)	- Minimum US$93.9bn total NBM revenue at floor pricing (actual expected above minimum)	n.a.
Term Length	- SCAs signed into 2031 (vs. 2Q 5 years (DC/Consumer), 3 years (Auto))	- 5-year term, subject to annual negotiations - (rolling basis, can add additional year)	- 5 years on average - extensions under discussion	Up to 5 years; Weighted average duration 4+ years	Up to 5 years
Agreement Structure	- Take-or-pay, binding volume commitments	- Mutually binding contractual conditions; - Committed demand assurance; rolling contract-based	- Strategic partnerships beyond volume supply; - long-term volume commitments + deposits	- S-D commitments defined by year and by quarter; - Financial guarantees release toward end of each agreement	- Multiyear supply agreements; - Mutually binding contractual conditions
Incremental in 3Q		- More LTA customers; HBM sold out in 27 with target prices.	- +4 customers; DRAM/HBM effectively sold-out through 29		- Guiding 2027 is sold out

- 2026E TSR ranking: SKH > SEC > Kioxia in Asia, more commentary from SNDK over MU. Heading into 3Q26 result season, investors have been increasingly scrutinizing shareholder return plans, demanding higher payout ratios on the back of resilient earnings. Our order of preference in the Asian memory space on shareholder return execution is as follows: 1) SKH (TSR surprise on the upside of W100T in 26E which was pleasantly followed up after lifting the shareholder return pool from <50% to >50% FCF); 2) SEC (sticking to its ~50% FCF payout and W90-W110T return in FY26E, albeit with limited surprises of lifting the total pool in 3Q26A earnings conference); and 3) Kioxia (meeting the minimum investors expectations through dividend but with unclear definition of 100% excess cash and lack of an imminent buyback, in our view). From the U.S. memory space (both stocks covered by Harlan Sur), SNDK has announced a TSR nearing ~88% of FCF in CY3Q, albeit the absolute size is minute compared to Asian memory suppliers. Lastly, MU shared little information on share buyback/dividend payout policy due to the CHIPS Act. We believe TSR will continue to act as an important barometer for valuation multiples and view SKH as the company that is executing the most smoothly.

- Server sales mix reaching mid-to-high 60% in DRAM; 40%+ in NAND. The CSP-driven AI upcycle is forcing memory makers to prioritize server memory production, tightening the industry ASPs, and raising the server sales mix across the board. Based on company filings and guidance, we estimate server sales mix rising to 60%+ in DRAM (server DRAM and HBM combined) vs. 50%+ in 25A and on-road to reach 70%+ in 27E. For NAND, we believe SEC/SKH carries 60%+ exposure to the server segment thanks to long-lasting dominance in eSSD/Solidigm acquisition, while the laggards such as SNDK/Kioxia carry relatively less server sales mix (40%-45% in 26E vs. 13%-mid-30% in 25A). The unprecedented server demand is likely to push the server sales mix even further, crowding out production volume for smartphones/PCs which will likely further weigh on the B2C end-market (likely reflected through price hikes (both component/set devices), unit correction, etc.). We believe the weak B2C earnings are likely to be easily offset by server demand strength, albeit believe the concentration risk is worth monitoring.

Table 4: Server compute memory revenue mix comparison across major memory makers

Server vs. B2C mix	3Q26A	2026 vs. 2025
SKH	High-60% (DRAM+NAND)	Mid-60% vs. High-50% in 25

MU	Mid-60% (DRAM+NAND)	~70% vs. Mid-50% in 25

- Sub-sector snapshot: Demand outstripping supply for servers; dwindling B2C demand. 3Q26 earnings commentaries across AI ecosystem partners point to firm server demand with hyperscalers' capex rising +87% y-y in 3Q (~US$217bn) and higher 27E spend. AI related revenue accelerated in CY3Q26 (Azure: + 48%/GCP: +103%/AWS: +39) with guidance pointing to further acceleration in CY4Q26E (for Azure/AWS). Server ODM monthly results indicate server demand outstripping supply with memory being the major bottleneck (report), while consumer-related devices (smartphone/PC) struggles from chip-flations and price-hikes evidenced by INTC guiding DD% y-y PC unit TAM decline in 26/27E (report). We believe the end-demand outlook that memory makers are observing is consistent with the commentaries from the broader AI ecosystem partners. We do believe the underlying demand for servers (both general/AI) remains robust, backed by frontier AI labs competing for model launches and accelerated AI capex which will offset the B2C earnings weakness. Of note, our US H/W team expects AI capex across tier-1/tier-2 hyperscalers to reach $1.5trn in 27E vs. ~$800bn in 26E, a 87.5% growth (report).

- Memory trading at <3.5x 27E P/E vs. 98% EPS CAGR in 26-28E. Memory stocks that were once trading at 6-7x P/E have significantly de-rated on AI sustainability/funding concerns, HBM de-specs, disbelief in the elongated upcycle and now trade at <3.5x P/E while the EPS has not seen any correction helped by memory shortages across the industry and LTAs. The order visibility is extending as we progress through the year, but we believe the market is anticipating AI funding risk and power bottleneck driven memory downcycle as early as in 1H27E. This puts memory in a tricky spot as investors debate between "too-cheap to ignore" vs. "it is cheap for a reason." We believe EPS cuts are unlikely to happen in the next 6M as the memory S-D gap is too wide to narrow over a short period of time and memory earnings will have a buffer protected by LTAs and prepayments.

- Memory stocks are down 45% from recent peaks; Bullish on the sector but stay selective. Memory stocks have corrected 45% from the 2026-peak (vs. SOX: -29%) as the skepticism around AI funding quickly flipped the sentiment amidst the market anticipating memory to be the biggest victim once the correction occurs (equally saying memory was the biggest beneficiary from AI). Amidst the depressed market sentiment, shareholder returns were the catalyst that we hoped for and was well-executed by SKH, but the stock further corrected post 3Q26 earnings implying the bearish sentiment will likely continue until the end-market concerns are resolved (i.e. AI funding, AI monetization, etc.). We believe memory fundamentals are solid with memory pricing likely to remain elevated in 27E, but believe the stock will likely remain range-bound in the near-term due to a lack of imminent catalysts. On a medium-term basis, we continue to view risk-reward as attractive and remain OW across all our coverage companies and rank our next three months order of preference based on shareholder return policy upside: SKH (OW) > SEC (OW) > Kioxia (OW).

Source: Bloomberg Finance L.P. and J.P. Morgan; price data adjusted for stock splits and dividends.
Initiated coverage Sep 09, 2026. All share prices are as of market close on the previous business day.

The chart(s) show J.P. Morgan's continuing coverage of the stocks; the current analysts may or may not have covered it over the entire period.
J.P. Morgan ratings or designations: OW = Overweight, N= Neutral, UW = Underweight, NR = Not Rated

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:
J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst's coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan's Research website, https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com.
